Abstract of information available

Human remains representing at least one individual have been identified. The three associated funerary objects are one lot of matrix, one unmodified stone fragment and one lot of charcoal. On September 1st, 1960, Los Angeles Sherriff's Office found human remains in Palmdale, Antelope Valley, Los Angeles County, CA (17.C.102/662.G). A Sherriff Sergeant brought the human remains and associated funerary objects to the Southwest Museum (now part of the Autry Museum) on September 3rd, 1960, and donated them to the museum as they were archaeological in context. Antelope Valley is the shared ancestral territory of the Serrano and Tataviam people. Morongo Band of Mission Indians, California; Yuhaaviatam of San Manuel Nation and two non-federally recognized tribes (San Fernando Band of Mission Indians; and Fernandeno Tataviam Band of Mission Indians) claim cultural affiliation to the human remains and associated funerary objects.

Cultural affiliation
