Abstract of information available

Human remains representing at least four individuals have been identified. No associated funerary objects are present. Originally removed from San Nicolas Island, California on behalf of the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation between 1900 – 1930s, the individuals were acquired by the Department of Anthropology, Columbia University at an unknown date.

Columbia University donated the individuals to Garvies Point Museum and Preserve on January 22, 1970. There are no records that indicate any potentially hazardous substances were used to treat the human remains.

Human remains representing at least 26 individuals have been identified. No associated funerary objects are present. A total of two individuals were removed from San Clemente Island, California by an unknown individual at an unknown date and came into the collection of Mrs. E. L. Doran at a later unknown date. In 1917, the individuals were purchased from Mrs. E. L. Doran by A. E. Pace on behalf of the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation. In 1956, the individuals were transferred to Dr. Theodore Kazamiroff of the New York University College of Dentistry. A total of two individuals were removed from San Clemente Island, California by an unknown individual at an unknown date, and were accessioned by the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation at a later unknown date. In 1956, the individuals were transferred to Dr. Theodore Kazamiroff of the New York University College of Dentistry. The remaining 22 individuals were removed from San Clemente Island, California in 1923 by Ralph Glidden under sponsorship of the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation. In 1956, the individuals were transferred to Dr. Theodore Kazamiroff of the New York University College of Dentistry. Records from the New York University College of Dentistry indicate the crania representing three individuals are covered in a shellac-like material; however, there are no other records that indicate any potentially hazardous substances were used to treat the human remains.
